LECTURE: From Structural Racism to Personal Practices: Embodying Anti- Oppression for Reconciliation

What is it?

This lecture will provide participants with insight on how racism is a design element, not a flaw, of settler colonial states like Canada. Citizens of Canada (and those subjected to its power) unwittingly carry behaviours that manifest racism in our social, political and economic structures.

Without behavioural change, knowledge of structural racism can only lead to apathy and immobilization. In this lecture, we invite participants to learn the stepping stones for personal embodiment of anti-oppressive practices as preparation for reconciliation.

Who?

Dr. Eva Jewell (Ma'iingan dodem, she/hers) Research Director at Yellowhead Institute, and co-author of the yearly "Calls to Action Accountability: A Status Update on Reconciliation", invites you to this Taking Action! lecture.
